

God and Humanity in Auschwitz: Jewish-Christian Relations and Sanctioned Murder, New Brunswick, NJ: Transaction Publishers, 1995

| Dietrich, Donald J.

Changing the way we think is generally the necessary prelude to the way we act. If Christian antisemitism led to contempt, then it is important to revise theology and the values it sustains. Dietrich's valuable book is an exposition of these themes, showing that 'sanctioned murder' is still part of our mental framework.
