Our Father Abraham. Jewish Roots of the Christian Faith. Grand Rapids: William B. Eerdmans and Dayton: Center for Judaic-Christian Studies, 1989

| Wilson, Marvin R.

It is only in the last decade that the evangelical (or biblically conservative) wing of Protestantism has formally entered the arena of Jewish-Christian relations. Marvin Wilson, Professor of Biblical and Theological Studies at Gordon College, Wenham, Mass. is at the forefront of this new venture. What he has produced here must be of immediate interest to evangelicals, and must be attended to by them, but its reading public should include Christians of all persuasions. The questions for discussion at the end of each chapter provide an added bonus.

Copyright JCRelations