

The Coming of the Millennium. Valley Forge: Trinity Press International, 1996

| Fasching, Darrell J.

Fasching argues that Christians must pursue an "alienated theology," that is, a theology done as if they were aliens and strangers to their own stories and traditions. Instead, they should see them through the stranger's eyes, thereby coming to understand that the essence of evangelization is hospitality to the stranger.