

Sikora, Piotr

Piotr Sikora studied theology at the Pontifical Academy of Theology in Krakow, Poland, and philosophy at the Jagellonian University in Krakow. He received his Ph.D. at the Jagellonian University (2002). At present, he is Assistant Professor at the Pontifical Academy of Theology in Krakow. His basic areas of research are the epistemological status of religious discourse and theology of religious pluralism. He has written a book (in Polish) on religious discourse from the perspective of Hilary Putnam's philosophy, as well as numerous articles.